

LEXINGTON—PRINTED BY JOHN BRADFORD,

PRINTER TO THE COMMONWEALTH.

BLAZE,

WHO was imported from England in the year 1793, at five years old, by Col Hugh Nelson, of York town, in Virginia, will stand the ensuing season which will commence the 10th day of March, and end on the 10th day of August, at Col. Robert Saunders's tavern, Scott county, 3 miles from Georgetown, and 8 from Lexington; and may cover mares at five pounds each, the season. A preliminary attested note, will be required with the mare, for five pounds, payable the 15th day of December ensuing—which may be discharged by the payment of twelve dollars, if paid within the season. Seven dollars the single leap, to be paid at the stable door. Young cattle, or good beef cattle, or inexchangeable hemp, will be received at the market price, if delivered at said Saunders's by the 25th of December, to discharge the 5 pounds.

There will be large and excellent meadows, well enclosed for mares from a distance, at 2s. per week. Great attention will be paid to mares, to give general satisfaction, but will not be answerable for escapes or accidents that may happen.

BLAZE is a beautiful bay, near seventeen hands high, nicely marked, of uncommon great strength and activity; his figure is given up to be unexceptionable.

WHO may incline to carry on the business of rectifying spirituous liquors and the manufacturing cordials in an extensive manner, may now be supplied with the necessary articles for carrying on the same, by applying at the sign of Andrew McCoy's Apothecary Shop near Gray's Lexington. The Articles principally are for making the following liquors, viz.

Spirituous distilled water ditto clove-water ditto orange-water, all sorts, &c. Also for making brandy and genee a equal in flavor and quality to that imported.—There are upwards of 300 lbs. of Holland-jumper berries, and 100 lbs. uniscent, which may be purchased distinct from the other articles, if applied for. Any person or persons wishing to purchase the wares or the wares of the articles for making brandy and cordials, will (if required) receive genuine instructions gratis, how to use them to the greatest possible advantage.

Also an exceeding good COPPER STILL, almost a quarter of an inch thick, containing better than 300 gallons, with a worm inside of the very best pewter, having a turn and weighing upwards of 500 lbs. with a large quantity of wrought iron tubular to set up the still in the completest manner—the whole of which will be sold together on very low terms, and instructions given for fixing the works in the most complete order, so that it can be worked with more ease than many stills are now of 100 gallons.

N. B. Cordials can be made to more advantage in warm than cold weather. Also, a FARM, of one hundred acres or so, on the waters of Tate's Creek, is about one mile and a half from Winchester, and four miles from the Kentucky river. Four acres of which is excellent tobacco land, a very good down log house, nearly two stories high, with an excellent spring ten yards from the house—also, a good barn, sufficiently large for four horses. On the said plantation there is a good apple mill and two branches sufficiently large to erect a mill large enough to carry on the hipping or distilling business. The place will be sold cheap as the possessor is in want of money.

JUST PUBLISHED,

AND FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE—PRICE 9d. An Expolitory Letter

EDWARD ROBERTSON TO GEORGE WASHINGTON, Lord of Mount Vernon.

An address to Mr. KEILING.

SIR,

THERE is not a single truth, in the whole science of morals, more evident, than that a bad cause, will produce contemptible measures, and that the advocates for erroneous principles, will shrink from the dignity of rational debate, to the meanest subterfuge.—Experience justifies this assertion; and as a melancholy instance of what a conspicuous figure, man is capable of making, in the world of folly, your late address, is not amongst the least memorable.—You have betrayed a want of stability, that would have disgraced the memory of the venerable character you assume; for instead of manfully combating principles, for the service of your country, you have quitted the ground, and fled from debate, with the precipitation of a pursued thief. You have launched out into an immense field of satire, and abuse, where every object has tempted you to lay aside the exalted character of the statesman and philosopher, to assume one, which the whole world, in every age, has united to condemn. In acting on this ground, you have even made a victim of the noblest principle of a good citizen, your duty; and to protect your cause from that state of political ignominy to which it is to be hoped the good sense of your country will speedily consign it, you have made a burnt offering of your reason, as a sacrifice to the shrine of folly.—This conduct, sir, betrays such symptoms of palpable stupidity, that your piece would have remained unperceived, upon the principle of its being unworthy a rational attention, did not with to suggest to you, sir, and to the declamatory party for whom you write, that Algernon Sidney, is incapable of receding from opposition, upon any principles as long as he makes reason the polar star of his opinions. This derivation from the principles of candid investigation, this want of stability in a cause which your folly or your ignorance, had led you to suppose was a good one, it becomes the disfigurement of a Keiling, once the ornament of English jurisprudence, but now the instrument of a babbling tribe, whom a pious attention to his memory, should have infused a more respectful deference. But, sir, your folly has precluded you from making any distinctions; and being a mere child in politics, you have not yet learnt, to make a discrimination between that kind of conduct, which would have made you respectable in the opinions of your party, and that, which both your friends and your opponents, have very generally united to reprobate. Instead of being governed by the principle, that investigation was the parent of truth, that the present crisis, demanded a serious elucidation of the point in question, that it comported with the duty and dignity of a free man, to deliver his sentiments for the service of his country, unbias'd by every circumstance of control, you have lost sight of principles that would have governed an Athenian scholastic, in a similar situation, and proved to the world, beyond the power of contradiction, that the republic of letters, may entertain no very sanguine expectations, on the score of your talents.

Did you mean, sir, to enlighten the citizens of Kentucky, by the remarks contained in your hand bill? or did you merely suppose that the feelings of Algernon Sidney, were to be wounded by the farcical turn you gave to the subject? If the former was your intention, I can compare the essay to nothing more, as the author of the rights of man observes, than "darkness attempting to illuminate light;" and if the latter was your object, I candidly assure you, that you have been mistaken; for neither, your genius, or your wit, your knowledge of politics, or your talents for composition, have raised you to sufficient dignity in his opinion, either to feel your superiority, or to dread your rivalship.—He knows too well the degree of ignominy you bear, in the republic of letters; and if any principles of his heart, were to be aroused upon the occasion, it would be, to topple your folly and to laugh at your ignorance.

There have been innumerable instances, Mr. Keiling in the field of politics, of men, so exceedingly fallible, as to write their own cause and to wield the dagger against their own principles.—The first symptom of this revolution, you have discovered, in addressing your hand bill, to Sidney and not to the subject; and a second, which prophesies that you either think your cause a bad one, or that you know too little of principles, to hazard a fundamental enquiry is, that you have not refused with the same spirit, that you have ridiculed.—Do you suppose, sir, that the enlightened part of the community, will become profelytes to your cause, merely from the force of satire which you have levelled against the opposite side of the question? In deciding upon so important a subject, they naturally look for argument, to fortify their doubts. You have withheld this, and they will be apt to think unfavorably of a cause which its advocates are either unwilling or unable to defend.

Why did you not, sir, nobly step forward, if your cause was a good one and convince the world that it really was so? Instead of doing this, you have, like the Sea-Gull, skimmed the political ocean, and been frightened from your prey by the approaching prospect of an assailant. Sidney has, however, pursued you to your retreat, and ventured to attack you upon your own ground. He knows how and when to commence hostilities, as well as to make an honourable retreat. He therefore, takes his final leave of both you and the subject, after having witnessed your political suicide, and dropped a reverential tear over the infallibility and weakness of human nature.

Peace to thy memory, unfortunate Keiling! Thou hast scratched an epitaph, to lay with thy grave; and the enlightened world has kindly flung thy remains in the obscure tomb, which nature and nature's God originally intended for thee. May no political contentions disturb thy rest! May no unhalloved aristocrat haunt thy peaceful repose.

ALGERNON SIDNEY.

Mr. SIDNEY,

SINCE it was suggested to me, (in an embarrassing manner) that you intended to address the author of the piece signed Keiling, through the medium of the public papers, I made every enquiry necessary to enable me to reply—but to my utter astonishment I find, that society is enjoined on the printer, until it shall appear in his paper—the cause of this surprises my conjectures, unless it be—alas, poor Sidney!—That corrupt I, am afraid will ever remain in your way.

KEILING.

N. B. Keiling intends to answer Sidney, as soon as possible.

CENSUS.

Agreeably to an order of the trustees, the following report was made by the alicitors of the number of inhabitants of this town.

402 males above 12 years of age.
207 females above 12.
246 under 12.
360 negroes.

London, February 9.

In the council of five hundred on the 11th of February, it was decreed, that I have henceforth all subjects relative to the marine and army of England shall be the great object of the day, and have priority over all others.

2d. That the committee of marine shall employ itself in preparing an act of navigation, which shall secure the liberty of commerce and the rights of maritime nations at the period of general peace.

Various rumours are in circulation throughout France, relative to disputes among the directory, and new projects of a change in their constitution. It appears that general Angereau has been appointed to the command of the army on the frontiers of Spain, and it is announced as a truth of great importance.

By our letters from France we are informed that the flag of truce which failed with the Prussian minister, was captured by a French privateer, and the seamen put in irons.

February 13.

The unfortunate city of Lyons seems doomed to suffer new calamities; by a decree of the directory, it has been declared in a state of siege. The accounts from Paris and Spain portend important events.

February 14.

The lines of Plymouth have just undergone a complete repair; and several pieces of heavy ordnance are now planted. There is a guard at each of the two barrier gates, and an additional body of troops seems to be looked on as the only thing necessary to ensure a complete defence.

The floating batteries for the defence of the harbours of Waterford, Kinsale, Limerick, Galway, Wexford and other ports in Ireland, have all arrived safe at their station. Some of these are of fifty guns each, which, with the numerous gun boats, and the disposition of the military forces on or near the sea coasts, leave no reason to fear any attempt of an enemy's invasion.

Philadelphia, April 17.

Abstract of foreign intelligence received at New York, by the brig Ann and Mary, in 34 days from Cork.

The French troops under general Berthier entered Rome on the 10th February, French troops have entered the territory of Berne.—A constitution has been sent to Pays de Vaud from Paris, by citizen Ochis, and adopted. Buonaparte was at Calais.—D'Arango is to be tried. Spain has granted permission for 50,000 troops to march through that country to Portugal.—Hamburg has submitted to all the French requisitions.—The late hour at which the mail arrived prevents enlarging.

A gentleman in this city has received a letter from Norfolk, dated the 14th inst. which mentions, that a vessel in a short passage from London, seen going into Baltimore, reported, that the American commissioners had left Paris, and were in London.

Elizabethtown, (N. J.) April 17.

FOREIGN ARTICLES.

By an arrival at New-York on Sunday last from Cork, in 34 days, we learn "That the senate of Hamburg has acceded to the demands of the French relative to the seizure of English merchandise, the English expelled, and the shutting up of that port against the commerce of England:—that the emigrants were ordered to quit the city in 24 hours:—that the attack on England, which was intended to be about the first of April, with 300,000 men, was to be a general one:—that the French troops have entered Rome and taken possession of St. Angelo and the capitol: that the Spanish fleet had failed from Cadiz and supposed to have formed a junction with the British fleet:—that citizen Priper, artist, has just submitted, to the directory a plan for a floating camp, composed of vessels of an absolutely new construction, and of which the solidity shall be such, that it will be capable of resisting the effects of the sea, and all the attacks of the enemy. The author proposes to construct this camp of a sufficient size to contain 100,000 men. A number of distinguished artists have seen this plan, and have deemed it worthy of fixing the attention of the government.

Several letters from Germany announce that for three months past, England has been at work with the different cabinets of Europe, especially Peterburgh, Berlin, and Vienna, to prevail on them to become mediators in their favor with France. While our government declares a war of death against that of England, Buonaparte in the silence of a cabinet, prepares himself to fulfil the terrible decree. Government has issued proposals to painters to finish paintings of our most celebrated victories; as well as sculptures for the monuments of our greatest generals.

If we can believe letters from Rastadt, the emperor is now seriously occupied in a project of pacification, between France and England; they even go so far as to flatter us with hopes of speedy success.

[Paris Paper.]

The king of Prussia has agreed to the cession of his possessions on the left bank of the Rhine to France.

It is confidentially reported in a Paris paper of the 5th February, that general Berthier has entered Rome, and that the Pope has fled to Malta.

The French government is seriously employed in preparing for the descent on England—there have been sent provisionally to the coasts of the channel and the ocean, 40 demi-brigades of infantry, 31 regiments of cavalry, 2 do. of foot artillery, 2 of horse do. 4 companies of artificers, 4 do. of pioneers, 2 battalions of miners, 2 corps of pontoon men, all commanded by 18 generals of division, 47 generals of brigade, and 20 adjutant generals; among which are Berthier, Kilmaine, Marecot, Kleber, Champignon, Maille, Serrurier, Victor, Lafite, Vieux, Vandome, Nichespore, Ney, and adjutant general Hendeit—all the flower of the armies.

TAKEN up by the subscriber on Brush creek, in Green county, a black horse 7 years old, a small ear in his forehead, and a small scar, branded on the new shoulder 10 above 14 hands high, appraised to £12.

SACRED TO THE MUSES.

THE MISERIES OF HUMAN LIFE.

ALL why the catalogue of ills prolong,
And swell with complicated woes, the song?
Seeking those darker moments of despair,
When all the passion, fierce and unconfined,
Rush with the tempests fury on the mind.
—Add reason, budding from her station bear—

When poverty, to every other pang
Adds her keen edge—presents an infant train,
Who with imploring eyes around thee hang,
And raise their supplicants for bread—in vain.

Stern fate, perhaps, determin'd to destroy
All that was precious—All that wouldst to save;
And crull, at once, the source of every joy—
Blots the young comfort, blooming in thy arms,
Nipt, in the bud, a daughter's op'ning charms,
Or gives thy bosom friend to an untimely grave.

ANECDOTE.

A parson having a mind to try the arithmetic skill of a boy, asked him how many bliss he it would take to make a quail—the boy after a moment's hesitation, answered "Just as many as it would take parson to make a man of sense."
